Mrs. Marti, nee Ross, the widow of the late Albert Marti, was born in Homer Township November 9, 1873, and has lived in that township all her life.

She is survived by three sons, daughter Mrs. Wm. Taylor of Chicago and one sister Mrs. John Marti of Caton Farm.

Mrs. Brown Campbell New President of Tinley Park Woman's Club

The Tinley Park Woman's Club held their annual meeting Wednesday afternoon in the Village hall.

Reports for the year were given by the various chairmen which showed an active year. Altho Tinley Park Woman's Club is not many in number, much encouragement was felt when they looked back over the year and reviewed what they had done, among which were contributions to the Funds of Cancer, Infantile Paralysis, local Citizens Club and the Red Cross.

The Club also contributed $5.00 to the Tinley Park Public School Glee Club and to other local musicians to encourage them in their study of that art, over 100 cup cakes and magazines were taken to the Occupational Therapy Department at the Infirmary at Oak Forest; a book entitled "Indians of Yesterday" was purchased and given to the local public school library and a contribution was made to the Indian Scholarship Fund whereby 5 Indian girls are given the opportunity of entering schools of nursing; the Club encouraged the participation by local school students in the Art and Essay contests of the State and in the Art, a Tinley Park boy, Richard Bernardini, was awarded one of the five prizes and he won a very fine picture for the local school. The Club also is presenting student Bernardini with a gift for his fine effort and in the Essay contest, June Koehler of the Trinity Lutheran school, won a book from the Third District as her essay won a prize. The Club is justly proud of these local students and glad they were able to bring these contests to our village.

Another Club member, Mrs. Roy Hannum is making fine progress in her study of writing Braille which writers are needed to supply books for the blind. A fine noble work.

A goodly number of the members took the Red Cross First Aid course and are working in the work room making bandages and one member, Mrs. Edan has knit 40 sweaters and is making more and others have volunteered in the War and Red Cross Fund drives.

And especially proud is the club of one of their members, Mrs. Henry Breck, who as War Bond and Stamps chairman reported that she, in the past six months, has sold $217,818.75 in Bonds and $123.65 in stamps. The Quota for the Women's club in the district was $350,000.00 and considering how large many clubs are in this district, Tinley Park was most outstanding, for had it not been for Tinley Park the district would not have made their quota. Hats off to Mrs. Breck and for that the Club will see that she gets the Government award pin.

Mrs. O. Ebenhack, as chairman of the local Red Cross is active each week and is in charge of the Red Cross work room which does much work with few workers and Mrs. Ebenhack at this meeting made a plea for more women to come out to the work room each week.

The new officers elected are: Mrs. Brown Campbell, filling the unexpired term of Mrs. H. Beggs, who because of illness, resigned from that office and Mrs. Wagner was re-elected 1st vice president and Mrs. Eichelberg was elected corresponding secretary.

A couple of "casualties" were reported and taken care of very promptly. The fire Dept. also responded to a "still" alarm.

One student from Frankfort is among the 920 outstanding scholars at the University of Illinois whose good scholastic work will be given special recognition Saturday, May 1 at the nineteenth annual Honors Day Convocation.

"For many sons and mothers the anxieties and the partings of wartime add an unusual tenderness to the observance of Mother's Day this year", the proclamation said. "The finest qualities of our way of life, now being defended on the field of battle, are nurtured by the bravery and devotion of American motherhood. Bowman Official Shows Where Milk Money Goes

Dear Mr. Semmler:

I have purposely delayed answering your letter of March 8 until I received the survey conducted by the Harvard School of Business Administration. This survey covers 141 representative milk distributors in 33 states and the District of Columbia. The survey is, therefore, comprehensive and gives a complete picture of the operation of the milk industry. I am attaching to this letter the summary that I speak of for your consideration.

We are, quite naturally, happy to have the opportunity of presenting these figures to one of your readers and we are grateful to you for sending his letter to us. I remember when I operated a newspaper in a small Ohio town and I remember how everyone in the community thought that the newspaper business and the job printing business was most lucrative. In other words, it seems that we look at another man's operation and think how exciting it is. In fact, on this lovely spring day I wish I were back on the farm and envy any man who is there now. This human emotion runs through everyone of us and it goes back to the old reader adage that "other fields always look green".

Thanking you again for your kindness in writing and with every good wish, we are

Sincerely yours,

Bowman Dairy Co., J. A. Reitzel

The survey referred to by the Bowman Dairy Company has been prepared by G. P. Gundlach and Co. Dairy Educational division, Cincinnati, Ohio, who point out to milk consumers what happens to the dollar they spend for milk and dairy products.

Almost 57c goes to the farmer, 22c to dairy workers, a little over 18c for various supplies and operating expenses, a little less than 3-4 cent for management officers salary and a little over 2 cents for profit.

Come and visit the House of Terror. Later in the evening, there will be an election of a May Queen and her Attendants. There will be a voting booth where you may go and vote for your favorites for only a penny a vote. The last feature of the evening will be a playlet given by the dramatic group. Food Production Big Problem Says Con. Fred E. Busby of The 3rd District

Dear Bill:

The problem of supplying our civilian population with food in quantity and quality is becoming more and more a problem every day. It is only fair to warn those who can and have not already done so, to get busy and plant a vegetable garden at once. There is still time.

Not to be an alarmist, but I feel it is my duty to remind you, and ask that you in turn notify your readers through your paper of the fact that all indications point to a shortage of fresh vegetables all over the country this summer. I firmly believe it is the patriotic duty of everyone who has an opportunity, to plant a vegetable garden at once.

You are to be commended for your patriotic endeavors in publishing this information, and may I through you congratulate the 1883 individuals who informed thru yours and other community newspapers in the 3d district, supplied themselves with the bulletins by writing my office. These gardening and canning bulletins are still available for all who may wish to write for them.

Food may very easily be the deciding factor in Victory.

With kind personal regards, I am,

Sincerely yours,
Fred E. Busby

Here's hoping you are all OK by now.

Chimney Fire Threatens Mokena Home

A burning chimney set fire to the upstairs of the Braun dwelling on Front street in Mokena last Friday noon. Gerald Dunn, principal of the Mokena public school lives in this residence. The Dunn family did not know the place was afire until the fire department arrived.

The Eggers family and Harry Mall saw the smoke and the flames coming out from under the roof.

Damage by water and smoke was more than that caused by the fire. Fire Chief Herman Schweser estimates that the damage will run into several hundred dollars.

TO ATTEND TRI-ANNUAL

Members of the Frankfort Women's Club will attend the Tri annual meeting Tuesday morning and afternoon at the First Baptist church at Joliet.

MOVE INTO NEW HOME; SELL OLD HOME

Byron Nelson of Mokena has sold his home on Front street to a Chicago family and has moved his family into their new home on Wolf Rd.

ONE of the high spots in this sporting existence is that an argument can run along for over 40 years and still remain unsettled. We discovered this in quoting Doc Kearns, Jack Dempsey's former manager, to the effect that Bob Fitzsimmons weighed 157 pounds the day he faced Jim Corbett, back in 1897.

Doc has many supporters in this argument, but just as many who disagree, claiming that Fitz wobbled the scales at 177 before the Carson City party. Both sides will swear to their side of the debate. Jim Corbett, before he died, told me that he had a private checker on hand, who reported Fitz at 177.

Grantland Rice

Fitz had the legs of a welterweight and the arms and body of a big heavyweight. He was tough to guess.

A short while ago a good bunch threw a small party for Barney Ross. Benny Leonard, one of the all-time tops, was referred to as a "Philadelphia lightweight."

"What," asked one of the younger element, "is a Philadelphia lightweight?"

A Philadelphia lightweight used to be whatever you weighed, so long as the scales only registered 136 pounds. That part of it could be easily handled through the proper use of chewing gum, or glue or other skillful devices.

An Important Factor

We see where Beau Jack has been advised to take a rest, after losing stamina from a combination of lighter eating and overwork in the desire to keep his weight down.

Weight-making is an important factor in every game—boxing, horse racing, baseball, football and other sports. But it goes far beyond that. It is something that affects the majority of all people beyond the age of 21. It is something that doesn't belong to the athlete alone.

The greatest weight defier in sport was a fellow by the name of Babe Ruth. The Babe defied most conventions and most rules of life. He was the greatest of all the exceptions.

"Here's a funny thing," he told me a little while back. "They were always after me about keeping down my weight, which at that time, in the 1920s, was around 230. You remember the year I hit those 60 home runs? You know what I weighed that year? Just 253 pounds. I had that much extra bulk and bulk to put back of my swing."

That might have worked for the astonishing Babe, but it would have been destruction for the average or normal citizen.

The Argument

We were not present when Corbett and Ruby Robert met at Carson City those 46 years ago. But we've always doubted that Fitz won that title at 157 pounds, three pounds under the middleweight limit.

There was nothing that made Jim Corbett madder than to be given these weight figures. It was tough enough to lose, but much tougher to lose to a light middleweight.

A year or two later Fitz was fighting around 177 pounds. But outside of his skinny legs, he was built on the order of a strong 190-pounder from the waist up.

For all that the freckled Cornishman, as both a boxer and a puncher, was one of the top fighters of all-time. He was on beyond 35 when Jim Jeffries stopped him, well beyond his prime.

Pound for pound, I'll still nominate Harry Greb.

Pace Raters

Pace-rating is a distinct science in any game. Years ago, I recall the tall and willowy Robert Moses Grove facing the Yankees. The big left-hander struck out six or seven of the first nine Yankees that came to bat. He had more smoke than a burning oil well.

He put everything he had into every ball he threw. Before the end of the sixth inning, Lefty was on his way to the cooling showers, taking a tired arm along the melancholy route.

Counting his baseball experience in Baltimore and Philadelphia, it took Grove eight years to learn the correct way to conserve his left arm. This was in 1928 when he won 24 games and lost only 8. In 1931 he won 31 and lost only 4, one of the greatest of all major-league pitching years.

No pitcher knew better than Christy Mathewson how to rate himself when he was winning over 30 games a year and saving 8 or 10 others in relief work. Also, Cyrus Denton Young, the Paoli Phenom. "I had four different deliveries," Cy told me once, "and I used to mix 'em up to save my arm." Old Cy only won 511 ball games in 22 seasons. Matty had no interest in any earned run record. After getting the jump, Big Six would then turn part of the game over to his outfielders. It was a small difference, of course, with the deader ball.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THE desire to start picking pennant winners burns all the more brightly this year because, in our opinion, it probably will be the last opportunity to make selections on the major league races until after the war.

Much has been said about the chances for a wide-open scramble in both leagues, due largely to the inroads of the draft. But it is becoming apparent that the lines are clearly drawn. Confining this week's history-making, blood-curdling document to the National league, we agree with the betting commissioners that the Cardinals and the Dodgers are the teams to beat.

And, further than that, the Cardinals will be the National league entry in next fall's World Series.

Our complete selections for the senior circuit—which are as ridiculous as anything thought up by a tortured imagination—follow:

National League.

- | | |
|--------------|----------------|
| 1—St. Louis | 5—New York |
| 2—Brooklyn | 6—Pittsburgh |
| 3—Chicago | 7—Boston |
| 4—Cincinnati | 8—Philadelphia |

The Cardinals were the best club in baseball last season and it is our opinion they are still the best in their league today. What other team can boast of as strong a pitching staff? They have Mort Cooper, Ernie White, Max Lanier, Howard Pollet and six or seven others who are good. They can afford to lose four or five from this group and still have a fine staff left.

Durocher Speaks

Leo Durocher, as usual, doesn't agree with the findings. According to Leo, "the Dodgers will have a lot to say about it. And we'll say it with high-class pitching and a flock of base hits. I think we have every bit as good a chance to win the National league pennant as the Cardinals have."

Durocher admits that St. Louis gets the edge in speed. But he isn't giving anything away to the Cardinals' pitching staff. He can point with pride to Wyatt, Higbe and Head. This trio won 45 games last year and Leo figures them for closer to 60 games this season.

One issue can't be overlooked. Although the Cardinals look better going in, the draft may change the picture in a hurry. They are a younger team than the Dodgers, with greater speed and snap. But don't overlook this—those extra years may come as a big help to Brooklyn with the eyes of the draft boards looking in the general direction of youth.

The Chicago Cubs are due to trip up quite a few prognosticators who can't see them finishing better than their sixth place of 1942. The point has been made that the Cubs have as good a pitching staff as there is in the league.

We can't go along with this. Cooper, White, etc., with the Cardinals are too tough. The Cubs top hurlers are Derringer, Warneke, Passeau and Lee. In their prime it would be hard to find four greater stars. But they are no longer kids. In fact, their four careers add up to a total of 55 years—an average of nearly 14 years each in harness.

In 1942 these four Cub stalwarts won 53 games. It isn't impossible that they may be good for 60 wins in 1943. But they will need better hitting support than they received last summer.

The Case of the Reds

The Reds for 1943 are an unpredictable team. They have been picked for berths ranging from first place through sixth. They finished fourth last year. Their chief loss was Catcher Ray Lamanno who went into the armed services. Their main acquisitions are Eddie Miller, Braves' spectacular shortfielder, and Charley Brewster, Nashville star.

With Philadelphia safely ticketed for last place, the Pirates, Braves and Giants are likely to finish under a blanket.

Mel Ott, capable manager of the Giants, will get everything possible out of his team, but it's going to be hard to get along without men like Hal Schumacher, Johnny Mize, Harry Danning and Babe Young. New York will have hustle and some good pitching, but too many big guns are lost.

Frank Frisch will make every effort to lift his Pirates from last year's fifth place, but he lacks the material to make them a strong contender for pennant honors. The loss of Pitcher Ken Heintzelman to the armed forces may be offset by the addition of Xavier Rescigno, who won 23 games for Albany, and Wally Hebert, who won 22 games for San Diego last season. And Rip Sewell, who won 17 in 1942, will be on deck. The Pirates finished fifth last season with 66 victories and 81 defeats. Their chances to improve seem rather slight at the present writing.

Washington, D. C.

FOOD AND PAY-AS-YOU-GO

Although food was supposed to be the chief topic of discussion at the recent White House conference with farm leaders, actually Foodczar Chester Davis did his best to sell the President on pay-as-you-go taxation. He proposed it as an anti-inflation measure to drain off surplus income and ease the work of income tax payment on the average citizen.

"We have simply got to come to it, Mr. President," argued the food chief. "It was unfortunate that pay-as-you-go taxes were given a black eye by the Ruml plan. But pay-as-you-go taxes should go hand in hand with rationing to prevent overspending."

The President didn't commit himself definitely, but indicated that he would favor a pay-go plan if windfalls to the wealthy, as provided for in the Ruml plan, were completely eliminated.

Ed O'Neal, president of the Farm Bureau federation, and Ezra T. Benson, executive secretary of the National Council of Farmer Co-operatives, also took up the cudgels, O'Neal contending that taxpayers wouldn't be able to meet next year's assessments unless the pay-as-you-go plan or forced saving were adopted.

G.O.P. Watching Chances.

"I've made a poll of taxicab drivers and they are all for it," said O'Neal. "The great majority of the American people feel the same way. They are against windfalls but they feel they won't have enough money to pay their income tax, payment next year. If the administration doesn't take some action on this, the Republicans will steal the ball from you."

"That's right, Mr. President," chimed in Benson. "The farmers in my organization are overwhelmingly for a pay-as-you-go tax program. I think labor is, too."

"Maybe you're right," responded the President. "Chester (to Davis), I suggest that you talk this over with congressional leaders."

The conversation then turned to farm distribution and the President drew on his own experience as a farmer to illustrate the difficulty "little farmers" are having getting their crops to market.

"I used to raise 100 barrels of apples every year on my Dutchess county farm in New York," the President said. "I also raise some apples on my land in Georgia."

Apple Competition.

The President grinned to Albert Goss, master of the National Grange who hails from Washington, the biggest apple-producing state in the country: "I'd stack my apples up against those you produce in Washington any day."

"You're getting out of your class, Mr. President," smiled Goss. "Have you ever eaten a Delicious?"

"You win, Albert," chuckled the President, "but the point I am trying to make is this—little farmers like myself, and the same goes for all other farmers who don't have the advantage of co-operatives, have encountered a lot of difficulty marketing their crops and getting their money since the war began because of the transportation problem and other factors."

"Don't you think the government should step in and buy up apples and other products that have been running into distribution troubles and store them in the warehouses?" the President asked Goss. "It would take a lot off the market and help many little farmers who are hard up for cash."

Helping Little Farmer.

"I don't agree with you, Mr. President," replied Goss. "I think the way to protect the little farmers is by continuing the agriculture department 'support price' program. Farmers can get along if they are assured that they can get fair prices and a decent break on priorities for machinery to produce their crops. I don't think the government should buy up and sell farm products when there is no necessity for it."

The President meditated for a moment and replied: "I guess you're right at that."

The meeting also thrashed out the question of price ceilings. Ed O'Neal of the Farm Bureau and Albert Goss of the Grange contending that if rationing were tight enough it wouldn't be necessary to have price ceilings, that rationing would automatically take care of prices. Justice Byrnes, Chester Davis and Jim Patton of the Farmers Union argued to the contrary. The President decided with them.

His order shortly thereafter putting price ceilings on almost everything was the chief result of the meeting.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Ambassador John G. Winant has provided an apartment in London for six American soldiers wounded in action with the British Eighth army in Egypt. Three are Harvard men, three from Dartmouth. The six graduated as the top six in a British officers training school before going to Egypt with the British 60th regiment. This is the famous regiment which in Revolutionary times was withdrawn from action in America because it was too friendly to the colonial cause.

Guarding Fertility Farms' Best Resource

Replacement of Mineral Food Very Important

Regardless of how good a cropping system may be, it cannot of itself completely maintain the fertility of the soil. Moreover, the more efficient a farmer is in maintaining high production, the more rapidly will fertility leave his land, according to Dr. C. O. Rost of the Minnesota agricultural experiment station.

Most good farmers are like a merchant who opens a store with well-filled shelves and by vigorous selling methods rapidly disposes of his goods, but neglects to order new stock. His stock of staple goods is soon depleted.

The staple goods first drained from the farmer's store in the soil will be nitrogen, phosphorus, potash, lime and organic matter. All crops, livestock and livestock products remove fertility from the farm. In Minnesota alone, it would be no exaggeration to say that the equivalent of at least 500,000 tons of commercial fertilizer is removed each year from the soil in the form of cash crops and livestock products. The situation in Minnesota is typical of what occurs every crop season throughout the United States.

But this is not the entire story. Scientists of the department of agriculture have estimated that 63 million tons of plant food materials are removed each year by erosion from the fields of the United States. Much of this loss is directly traceable to wasteful cropping methods, to failure to replace fertilizer elements or to grow cover crops and follow rotation systems.

In the majority of cases, losses from erosion can be largely eliminated by the use of proper crop rotations, special cropping systems and good soil management practices which include the use of fertilizer. These, when combined with other supplementary practices such as contour plowing and strip cropping, can help eliminate erosion.

The problem of replacing mineral plant foods drained away by crop production is serious and should receive serious attention. A part of the nitrogen removed may be replaced by growing inoculated legumes, but minerals cannot be replenished unless they are supplied in the form of commercial fertilizers. Surface soil contains the major part of the organic matter and a large part of the readily available nutrients.

He thinks our increased food production is a military secret.

HOGS

So valuable are all the hog fats that even the water used in the packing house is strained to retrieve floating greases. From these come liquid oils, pasty grease and hard tallow which is sold as lard, manufactured into salves, cosmetics, candle stock, metal polish, soap, lubricating oils for engines, explosives, burning oils and animal feeds.

Pepsin is produced from the linings of the stomach of hogs. Glands produce the drug insulin, and liver extract comes from hog liver. Only the large packers can market glands for pharmaceutical uses since they must be marketed quickly in large quantities before deterioration begins.

Blood of slaughtered hogs is used in refining sugar, printing calico, in making buttons, shoe polish, fertilizer and animal feed. Bones are cut into ornaments, buttons and combs and ground into bone meal and oil, animal feeds and glue.

Bristles from the hog are used as brushes. Hair from the body goes into felting, mattresses, upholstery, air filters and insulation for refrigerators. The skin is marketed for leather goods, razor straps, belts and gloves.

Large cows of any breed, when given an equal opportunity, average out better in milk production than small ones.

Nowadays stress is placed on growing green and yellow vegetables and tomatoes, high in Vitamin A and C, and on doing more canning, drying, freezing and storing of home-grown fruits and vegetables.

—Newman Levy.

City editors are like those you see in the movies . . . They really are . . . Cynical, indifferent and incessantly so-whatty . . . Ask Jim Bishop, one of the Mirror's nimble newspaper sleuths . . . Jim was a witness to this incident many years ago . . . It was one of those lovely tidbits that brightened a dull night . . . Out of the nowhere came a stranger loosely waving a pistol . . . "I wanna see the Fish and Game editor," he said softly, "very important" . . . And so Bishop brought him to the Fish and Game man . . . "I just killed my wife," began the fellow. "I trusted her in a trunk and then I tied up her boy friend in a chair and then I set fire to him. I always liked your column, so I thought I'd give you the scoop."

Bishop and the Fish and Game editor took him over to the city editor . . . Now this city editor is one of those guys who wouldn't blink if Rommel walked in and brought Hitler with him—and he was irked . . . "I'm busy," he said, motioning to his assistant across the slot . . . The murderer was told to repeat his story to the assistant city ed . . . He took a deep breath and rubbed his face, which was scratched like a ten cent ruby . . . As he unfolded the details he kept yanking chunks of wire and rope from his pockets, and waving the pistol . . . The city editor never looked up from the copy he was studying, except to stifle a butt.

"Now with this rope," said the killer, "I tied up her boy friend. And with this wire I strangled her lovely throat. And here is the pistol, you can see for yourself that one bullet is missing" . . . The indifferent city editor, who was still occupied with the dummy of a page, looked up and said to his assistant: "Hey. Think there's anything to this one?"

This actually happened recently in one of the editorial offices . . . There had been rumors again that a shake-up was taking place and that heads would roll . . . One morning a stranger sat at a desk in the corner and answered the phone when it rang and when it wasn't ringing, he just looked around at everybody . . . It gave the staff the screaming jitters . . . Nobody knew just what he was there for and all were afraid to ask . . . Finally, one feature writer engaged him in gab . . . "What is your job around here?" he asked . . . "Oh, I don't work here," was the reply . . . "Well, then," queried the other, "who are you waiting to see?" . . . "Oh," said the stranger, "I'm not waiting to see anyone. My friend works in the advertising department. I'm his insurance agent. He told me I could use this desk."

The reporters down at Police Headquarters are the most colorful, we think . . . They "live" in a shack across the street from the gold braid cops . . . Life is a game of pinocle, a brass bell bonging a second alarm, a slip boy shuffling in with a suicide's name and address or a phone call from the city desk to check on a rumor out of Washington that the Nazis are invading Turkey . . . But what we started out to say was that the kid who brings the morning papers to the niteside reporters there was bawled out by one of them. The boy had forgotten to leave a Times for the irate man . . . The kid said he was very sorry, and that it wouldn't happen again . . . "It better not," barked the reporter. "You know I bring a fish home every morning. What the hell am I gonna wrap it up in?"

My favorite newspaper man story always was the one about the veteran editor, who on Christmas Eve gave these instructions to a cub . . . "Now I want you to go down to the Bowery," said the boss, "and dig up some human interest about those poor unfortunates. Jot down how they enjoyed their Christmas dinner at the mission. Then after you cover the Salvation Army feast for the poor—bring me a couple of hot dogs."

Those are the kind of stories scribes tell each other, at any rate, and they have spellbound newspaper men ever since they got their first assignments . . . Take this one, first example . . . Nobody's asking you to believe it . . . But take it, anyhow . . . A reporter phoned his city desk about a homicide . . . "The core," he said, "is still at the scene of the crime!"

"Don't you mean corpse?" snarled the rewrite man.

"I certinny don't!" was the report. "There was only one!"

W-N-U RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Judy Jason, who is telling the story, receives an anonymous letter enclosing $500 and asking her to bid for an abandoned church to be auctioned the next day. She finds, in an old chest, the body of a man identified as Roddy Lane. The body disappears a few hours later. A fish shed burns, apparently killing an old man named Brown who is supposed to have lived there. Lily Kendall is found dead, with Hugh Norcross' scarf around her neck. Albion Potter gives Judy a picture of the church he has just finished. Bessie Norcross writes a confession. Hugh insists that his sister only confessed to save him.

Now continue with Judy's story.

CHAPTER XVII

Auntie was urging me to go back to the house. The boat was already at the water's edge. I wanted to see the final splash and learn if it would be safe. I hoped Victor Quade wouldn't get into it, when, with a mighty shove, it slipped into the bay.

As a matter of fact, nobody did. Just then Thaddeus Quincy let out a yell and waved his red table cloth like anything. Sure enough, a sail boat was making for our wharf. She had no tender, but as she came about the men hastily tied the Eleanor and stood shouting till it's a wonder anything could be made of it.

"Aho, there!" yelled the man. "Lane ready? Lost my tender." So he'd come expecting Roddy to go sailing with him. And Roddy hadn't kept the date.

"Lane's not here!" shrilled Quincy. "There's been a—"

De Witt held up his hands. "Let me, my friends." Then he bellowed: "Send the police—at once. Murder! Understand?"

The man let go the tiller a second to megaphone with his hands. "Not Lane! Did you say—murder? When he didn't show up I came after him. You want the police!"

I was sure he was going to capsize, but he righted his craft and sailed slowly, oh, it seemed so slowly, toward town across the cove.

"It won't be long now," Potter said, "and I'm utterly glad. Sorry for Norcross, though."

Uncle Wylie pulled at his old corn-cob pipe a moment. "Nella, where's my pipe? You know, the one I like."

"Where the police can't find it. How'd I know anybody'd confess? I—I burned it!"

"Dang it! Burned my best pipe! That was a smart thing to do! What'll the police think when they find you've deliberately burned some of the evidence?" Uncle Wylie was mad.

"Let 'em think what they please." Aunt Nella swept up the steps with dignity. "Come along, Mr. Norcross." She had no intention of sharing her precious elderberry wine with all of us.

But Hugh sank down in a chair, his head slumped forward and a dazed expression on his face, as if he could no longer take it all in. I sat in the next chair.

"Be a relief to be let alone in a nice quiet cell," he said to nobody in particular. "Only my own nerves to consider, for a change. I believe it'll be a rest. Maybe poor Bessie will snap out of it. Help her, Judy. And know this, before they come: If things hadn't turned out this way, I was going to tell you something. It doesn't matter now. You wouldn't want to hear it from a fiend like me."

I could still see the sailboat disappearing in the opposite direction. The sun was hot. Below us lay the charred place where the fish shed had stood, with its gruesome exhibit. Beyond, poor Lily, whom the men had thought best to leave where she was—cruel as it seemed to us all.

"There are plenty of people on this porch who could be convicted on evidence against them, the same as you, it seems to me, Hugh. Personally I can't see what you could have to say to me, after the way you tried to involve me in this awful affair," I said to him.

"Nobody could pin anything on you on account of the $800 I sent you."

"In $50 bills?"

He let it ride. "I wish they'd come and take me away. Suspense is terrible."

"Hughie, why did you put that glass bead in my powder compact and leave the bag for De Witt to find? You must have known it would implicate me."

"Oh, yes; the bead. It was a nice one. I found it. Thought you could give it back to Miss Kendall. Always picking 'em up for her."

"So you were. Pretty kind to a person you'd planned to kill." We'd been almost whispering, but now I got up to go into the house.

"Fraid it won't wash, Hugh Norcross; any more than the pool of blood Bessie says was at the foot of the church steps. No one else saw any traces of it. She's covering for you, and you're doing the same for her."

A whisper came between us. "Shut up, Judy! Go on with the act, Norcross. Know you're innocent, but it'll throw the real you-know-off-guard." Then aloud Victor said, so that the others could all hear: "Now that Norcross has cleaned his slate, can any of the remainder of you throw any light on various angles? Might keep some of it from the authorities, if it had nothing to do with the crimes—that is."

I saw my aunt turn her back and knew the teeth were being plunked in again. "Mr. Gerry and I will not mind their questions. I'll own up to destroying the pipe. Best most wives burn up a smelly pipe or two. It's silly to think, even if it dropped out of Wylie's pocket at the fish shed, it could have set the fire. Burned him, wouldn't it? Why don't you come clean about your daughter, Mr. Quincy? Can't do any harm now."

Thaddeus Quincy pounded the steps with his cane. He was sitting in his chair down at the foot of them, and now his face seemed strangely contorted as he glared at my aunt.

"Couldn't you leave her out of it!" he thundered. He had a motive, too! He had a stalwart cane. He could get around alone, for hadn't I blundered into him in the church aisle? Had his daughter been another of Roddy's victims? And why hadn't my aunt told me? A new respect for her came over me as Mr. Quincy sputtered: "She had nothing to do with this. Six years ago, my only child fell in love with and married that cad, Lane, while I was in Baden-Baden taking the cure. I was only gone nine months, but I never saw her husband until night before last, when he walked into the dining room here. He'd gone through the little money my daughter had received from her mother and deserted her for another woman before I came home. You can't imagine the refined cruelty he practiced on my little girl, before she went to Reno and divorced him. Now she's happily married again. You can see why I don't want her mentioned. She waited three years for him, and when he came crawling back after the Lane Bank scandal she saw reason and divorced him."

"Be a relief to be let alone in a nice quiet cell."

Hugh flamed. "It wasn't my sister! Bessie wouldn't have anything to do with another woman's husband."

"If she knew it," Quincy added. "Don't have a fit, Norcross. It wasn't your sister. Happened out West. The woman—I won't mention her name—but she dabbled in magazine illustrating. She was married, also, at the time. Deserted her, too. Led her a terrible life, I've heard."

There was a motive a yard wide—a man who's abused his daughter ought to be killed. Mr. Quincy himself said so, the next breath. It was lucky Lane had kept out of his sight.

"But I didn't kill him, nor that pestiferous Miss Kendall. I'll admit I came to the Head to try to get back my daughter's $10,000. Roddy told her, after he'd been drinking one day, he had a personal bank hidden at the Head, but not in the Castle. He'd fooled the police at the time of the search; but if she'd take him back he'd get it and repay her. The depression left us—especially her and her twin babies—she'd remarried after the divorce—hard up. I'd seen no mention of Lane in the Rockville paper. I determined to come to the Head and have a look-see. The auction of the church set me thinking. That would be the very place to hide wealth, in an unused church. So I came. I didn't know whether Lane was still afraid to show up here, or had taken the money away or not. My daughter refused to have anything to do with him or his money."

"Did you send me the cash to buy the church?"

He punched his cane at Hugh. "He did. Me, I'm poor. I bid, but it was a relief when you got it, Judy. That would give me access without suspicion. No, it's clear as a brook: The reclusive died by accident. The bridge collapsed. Norcross avenged his sister. And Miss Kendall fell. All we have to do is wait for the police, who should arrive in—"about fifteen or twenty minutes."

Victor's hands pat-a-caked silently. "Very, very interesting, Mr. Quincy. And the wind tied the blue scarf around Lily's neck?"

"You should know. I wasn't down there. We'd all left the church and gone to the bridge. You stayed a while, didn't you?"

"Yes. With Judy." Did Lily's death coincide with the gull's cry? I felt sure it had. Victor changed the subject. "Why? Anything to add, Potter?"

The artist jumped, his wide eyes bulging wider. "Me?" He shrugged. "Not a thing. Came here to paint, and a fine chance I've had! Never saw or heard of the place before. Went to Rockville first, just as you did, Quade, and a fellow said, when I bought some linseed oil and turpentine, 'If it's scenery you want, go to the Head.' So I came and liked it, and now wish I hadn't." It was the longest speech I'd ever heard from him.

The minister wasn't saying a thing. He stood by the rail, his sermon forgotten, gazing out toward Rockville. But he faced us quietly when Victor spoke to him.

"And you, De Witt, want to add a word?"

"You mean my prison record? It'll doubtless be raked up. I'll just say this: 'I lost money in the Lane Bank failure—several thousand dollars. I came here summers—Rockville, I mean—and preached there, as well as in New York. Because of a scandal, I was ousted from both churches. Some of the funds for maintenance were missing. The police received an anonymous letter hinting that there might be a connection between the embezzlement at the bank and the church affair—perfectly ridiculous. I was accused and sent to prison and served nine months; then one of my deacons confessed. I always thought Lane might have sent that anonymous letter. No proof could be found. There was a horrible interval of suspicion before the police accused me. At the church everyone thought him guilty. His father had come to me and I'd talked with Roddy earlier; that is, tried to get him to do the right thing. If he had taken poor people's savings or forged my name to a certain check I prayed with him to clear his conscience. He told me to go to—Hades. His father, my friend, shot himself, but that wasn't until after I'd been tried and convicted and served time. Now you know, and if you'll excuse me—" He left us and went to his room.

Victor announced quite bluntly, "Several things sound fishy to me. I wouldn't advise anyone to try to get away—in the Eleanor, for instance."

"Including yourself?" cried Hugh. "Including myself."

He was rehearsing his own status when I went in. I was a sight and the police were due any minute. We might all be taken to Rockville for questioning. I'd fix my hair and jump into a clean dress. That dotted blue voile would do. I hurried to my room. The money? Yes, it was still there!

I started to open my closet door and saw I'd have to move the church picture again. Oh, dear, more paint! But this time I was careful and turned it farther along the wall, taking hold of one corner and reversing the painting. Suddenly I sat back on my heels and stared. As plain as day the face of a funny little monkey showed through the place where I'd wiped it with a newspaper a little while ago. The only monkey I knew of as a pet belonged to Gloria Lovelace—Lily Kendall's niece! I began to wonder what the rest of the picture looked like.

The paint was still wet. As I swiped at it with paper a portrait emerged daubily. Nothing distinct—but a young woman with oodles of curls holding a monkey. If I could get some linseed oil or even kerosene, maybe I'd have a portrait. Two initials came to view—A. P., down in one corner. Albion Potter, of course.

I recalled a picture of Lily's niece—the movie star—and a monkey. I knew I shouldn't, but I deliberately went into Miss Kendall's room. And the first thing I saw was a photograph I'd often noticed before of a pretty girl with lots of hair holding up a pet monkey. That was queer enough. Had Lily given Albion Potter a commission to do a portrait of her niece right from the photograph? That must be it. Yes; there it was. A little linseed oil and anyone could see the subjects were the same. The painting, what I could see of it, looked very good.

I went up and put on my dotted voile and joined the others before the police came. "That was a swell portrait you did of Miss Kendall's niece, Mr. Potter," I smiled at him. "Only I wish you hadn't painted over it."

"Wh-why, I never did a portrait of her niece in my life!"

"But your initials are on it," I persisted. "On the back of the picture of the church you gave me."

CHRIST'S CHARGE TO PETER

LESSON TEXT—John 21:15-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.—John 15:13.

Breakfast for a hungry fisherman—that is what our loving and thoughtful Lord had provided on the shore of Galilee. He wanted to talk to Peter, but He knew this was needful first. There are some folk who think that following Christ is a doleful matter, devoid of every pleasure. Jesus never taught any such thing. He attended weddings and dinners even in the homes of those despised by men. But remember that He always did it for their spiritual good, not merely for His own enjoyment; and that He always brought the gathering up to His own spiritual level, rather than stooping to any worldly or wicked standards.

Here we find Him with a glowing fire upon which fish is broiling, and with bread ready for these hungry men. It was just like Him thus to meet in most delightful and satisfying fellowship those who serve Him. Draw up to the fire, Christian friends who are standing afar off. You may be so timid that, like the disciples, you will not dare to call Him by name (v. 12), but if you will come, you will find that the precious fellowship will soon warm your heart.

With the meal over, Christ turned to Peter and in their conversation we find the latter required to

I. Face Responsibility (vv. 15-17).

With kindly persistence our Lord brought Peter face to face with his responsibility of full-hearted devotion to Him. Before service can be rendered there must be a right relationship to the Lord.

Three times Peter was asked to declare his love for Christ. Such a public confession was quite in place, before the man who had thrice denied his Lord was restored to a place of leadership. The words "more than these" (v. 15) indicate that Jesus was asking of him a high measure of devotion. It is no more than He has a right to expect of us.

The conversation after breakfast that morning was a very profitable one. One is reminded, by contrast, that few of our mealtime discussions are very useful. Many (perhaps most) after-dinner speeches and conversations yield little profit. Here is an occasion when such was not the case. One wonders whether we would not be wise to take the suggestion and turn our thoughts and those of our dinner guests to spiritual things. Surely it should be so among Christian friends and in a Christian home.

II. Feeding Christ's Flock (vv. 15-17).

We review the same verses to point out that an expression of love to Christ means nothing except as it manifests itself in service. Like Peter, we are to be diligent about feeding His flock; whether they be the young and inexperienced lambs, or the mature sheep of the fold.

We tend to specialize. Even in soul-winning some give themselves to child evangelism while others reach only adults, and would hardly think of dealing with a child. True it is that we have varying gifts, and one does one type of work better than another. But let us avoid over-specialization. Every needy soul is a challenge to us as we present the gospel.

The word "feed" should be stressed. Here again the church has frequently failed. Men and women are won to a decision for Christ, and then forgotten. Sheep must be fed if they are to grow. A teaching ministry must accompany the evangelistic effort. They belong together, and to neglect either is to fail, at least, in that measure.

III. Follow Him to the End (vv. 18-24).

Endlessly ingenious are the devices of Satan. He who had sifted Peter like wheat (Luke 22:31) and had rejoiced in the weakness of his denial of Christ, now saw him stepping out into victorious living. He heard the prophecy of the martyr's death of Peter. So he put into his heart a question. Why should he suffer? What about John? What was the Lord going to do for him?

When our enemy cannot trip us up with temptation to personal sin, he resorts to the device of jealousy. Many promising Christian workers have become useless because they have taken their eyes off Jesus and put them on the persons and work of other Christians. Doing a work which was difficult and unnoticed but very important to God, they have felt the urge to quit because someone else seemed to have the easier task and receive more recognition.

The answer of Jesus in verse 22 plainly states that it is not the place of one disciple to judge the course of life of another, nor to gauge his own devotion to Christ by another's place or service.

The word of Christ to us is the same as to Peter: "Follow me." We have all we can do to live our own lives in a manner well-pleasing to our Lord.

SNAPPY FACTS

ABOUT

Stout chains and podocks bind each of the four wheels to the bumpers of a Trenton, N. J. woman's car when she parks it in the streets at night.

It was not until 1916 that the U. S. made its first annual appropriation for Federal aid highways. Good roads, good automobiles and good tires are companion necessities in modern motoring.

It is generally believed that at speeds below 35 mph, tire blow-outs, whether front or rear, are not particularly dangerous for alert drivers, other things being equal. Another good reason for keeping to the rubber-saving 35 mph limit!

In return for their stimulated rubber growing and collecting activities the United States has agreed to pay South and Central American countries from 33 to 45 cents a pound for rubber until the end of 1946 at least. Before government price freezing, rubber was selling in the U. S. at 22½ cents a pound.

Dear Friends:

Just want to drop you a line to let you know I've been transferred down here to New Orleans. This sure is a change from Chicago. But isn't such a bad place. Its right on a lake and is quite a bit different than I pictured the south to be. The weather isn't so very hot here but probably will be plenty hot in a couple of weeks.

Well guess Ill sign off for now. Will you please have the Tinley Times sent to me here?

April 10, 1943

Dear Friends:

Since I last wrote you I have transferred to the Seattle Naval Air Station. The weather here, certainly is mild compared to that of Tinley Park. The scenery here is very beautiful also, and we have snow capped mountains in view all of the time.

I work in the assembly and repair department here. We overhaul every type of Navy plane from large flying boats to small trainers. Since we are nearer the Actual Combat Zone than most United States cities we have frequent air raid drills here. I am in a gun crew on top of one of the buildings and we man these stations 2 or 3 times a week. Every fourth night we stand a four hour watch and this proves to be the worst job of any we have to do.

We have very fine recreational facilities here. I am playing on the station's baseball team. We have a fine Gym, Swimming pool, baseball diamond and movie house.

All in all, we have a fine base here and if only I could get to see all of you and my folks once in a while everything would be perfect.

Yours truly,
John Rensink, A. M. 3-c A&R US-NAS, Seattle, Wash.

LATE FROSTS MAY INJURE TOMATOES IF SET TOO EARLY

Tomatoes will be one of the principal crops in thousands of Illinois victory gardens this year, but they should not be set too early, because they are easily injured by late spring or early fall frosts.

Reasonably safe dates for transplanting are from April 25 to May 5 in southern Illinois, May 10 to 20 in the central part and from May 15 to 31 in the northern area of the state, says B. L. Weaver, associate in vegetable crops, University of Illinois College of Agriculture.

In choosing varieties, those resistant to fusarium wilt should be considered. This disease is soil borne prevalent thruout the state, usually making its appearance about the time early tomatoes start to ripen. Medium-early resistant varieties recommended are Pritchard and early Baltimore for northern and central Illinois and Rutgers for central and southern portions of the state. Illinois Baltimore and Marglobe are resistant late varieties. Ponderosa and Oxheart are popular home garden varieties, but both are susceptible to wilt and not high yielding, Weaver says.

Plants for a late summer and fall crop may be produced in the garden. Seed may be sown in hills where the plants are to grow, or in a row from which they are to be transplanted. Seed may be started much earlier than the safe dates for transplanting plants. Recommended dates are March 25 to April 5 in southern Illinois, April 10 to 20 in central Illinois and April 25 to May 5 in northern part of the state.

Pruning and staking tomatoes permits close spacing where garden area is limited. Although the yield a plant is reduced by this method, the yield per unit of area is increased, he adds. Plants are usually limited to a single setm and tied to a stake at intervals as they grow.

My Experiences At The Hospital

The following article written by Wilbert Cooper of Goodland, Indiana appeared in a recent issue of the (Brook, Indiana, Reporter. Mr. Cooper is related to the Cooper families of Mokena and Orland Park.

BY "Wib" Cooper

For the benefit of my friends who have been fortunate enough to stay out of Hospitals I would like to relate a few of my experiences while I was there. Having felt bad for some time and thinking I would need an operation I first called on one of the chief meat carvers in Lafayette. He asked me how old I was and if married and how many children I had. I told him I had 8 and he said, "I know now we had better operate", so he called the S. E. hospital and I was on my way. The Sister at the desk took my pedigree and asked me for my ration book 1 and 2.

I asked her if I'd get them back and she said, "You won't need them when you get out of here". A nurse then took me up to room 225 which I was supposed to share with 3 other men and proceeded to put me to bed. Not having planned to stay overnight I had to borrow a night shirt, one of those abbreviated affairs with no back and very little front which would have to be seen to be appreciated.

When I was ready for bed I asked the nurse what to do with my pocket book. She said, "It won't make any difference. You won't need that either when you leave." I didn't know just what she meant at the time but after paying my bill, I did.

Well it was 4 or 5 o'clock in the evening and I lay in my little white bed and took in my surroundings and proceeded to get acquainted with my room-mates.

One was a farmer with an appendicitis operation, another a young man also in for appendicitis, and the third a man with a hernia operation. He had been in the hospital several times in his life and had learned to make the best of a bad bargain and he tried to cheer the rest of us up all he could.

Well, I had just begun to relax a little when an orderly came in to prepare me for the operation next morning and he proceeded to give me a shave like I'd never been shaved before. Not being the gorilla type of man and thinking I might get a cut in price I said, "This isn't quite as big a job as some you've had, is it?" and he said, "It doesn't make any difference, you have to cover all the ground anyhow".

After this ordeal they began to serve supper. I was hungry as a 16 year old boy and all I got was a cup of tea on a tray with enough equipment on it for a white house banquet.

The nurse said I wasn't supposed to eat before an operation, which was as good an excuse as any for conserving rations. Well I rolled over on my side and tried to forget my hunger and while I had my back turned a pretty little nurse slipped up and said she was going to stick my finger. I said "Go ahead, I won't tell anybody" and she proceeded to do just that. I lost two nights sleep trying to figure out what possible kick she got out of that.

Well I lay there sucking my injured finger and believe it or not I slipped another pretty little nurse who drew curtains all around my bed and she says, "I'm going to rub your back," and I began to think if this keeps up I'm going to have a lot of confessions to make when I get home. The nurse kept looking in my little cabinet beside the bed. I asked her what she was looking for and she said, "Have you any alcohol?" I said, "No, but if I had I'd sure let you have a shot." She said I'd be the one that would need that tomorrow on the operating table. Well that kind of took the wind out of my sails for awhile, but I'll have to admit I did feel better after that back rubbing performance, but who would n't.

Well nothing eventful happened that night but I couldn't sleep and worked up a pounding headache. About 3 o'clock in the morning, a little Irish night nurse said, "You haven't slept a bit, have you?" I said "You're not kidding," so she gave me some Knock Out drops and I woke up next morning feeling fine.

I didn't get any breakfast and about 8:30 a little man rolled his body wagon up to my bed and the nurse said, "You're operation's going to be put ahead one-half hour." They rolled me onto the wagon and away we went and boy did we travel.

I said to the little devil, "I'm in no hurry if you aren't." We stopped somewhere enroute and he took a look at some records, saying "Is your name Wilbert Cooper?" I was sorely tempted to say No. In a few minutes we were at the operating room and I heard the Surgeon say "Next" and they rolled one guy out and me in.

I couldn't help but think this guy Kay Kyser hasn't anything on this bunch.

Well, they didn't seem to want any advice from me but paralyzed me from the waist down and the Surgeon went to carving for all the world like he enjoyed his work. He kept making funny, wisecracks to all of us. Though I like a joke as well as anyone, strange enough I failed under the circumstances to see anything to laugh at.

9:30 found me feeling fine but in a few hours my headache returned and I was really sick for 3 or 4 days.

One night they brought in a 16 year old boy who'd been knocked out in an auto wreck. He felt pretty good next morning but he sure didn't feel at home. He didn't get any breakfast and at noon the nurse brought in a tray and by the time she got out of the room he'd lapped it all up.

I said, "What's the matter son? Are you sick?" He said, "Heck no but I could eat that faster than they could bring it in." I said, "Yes, but how long could you keep it up," and he said, "Until I starved to death," and I believe he meant it.

There were a lot of funny things happened which would be hard to put in print but I would like to say this. If there ever was a man who learned to use and enjoy all this bed equipment in a hospital he's either Super Man or the darndest liar that ever lived.

In all fairness I want to say the hospitals are wonderful institutions and the nurses and staff all work hard and try to please and you'll have to admit the sick as a rule are hard to please.

Just the same, I still claim it's a better feeling to be leaving a hospital than entering one.

I wish to thank all my friends who wrote, visited or thought of me during my stay in the hospital.

Why I don't act my age

Act my age! Why, I'd be acting like an old worn-out cleaner that's ready for the scrap pile. Instead, I'm young and active, and can clean rugs with the best of 'em.

That's because my owner gives me extra special care. And it's mighty important now during wartime, because materials that usually go into vacuum cleaners are needed for making guns and tanks and planes.

If you ask me, I'd say my boss is wise and patriotic, too. And I suggest that you follow her example. It's really very easy.

First thing to remember is to empty the dust bag every time you use your vacuum cleaner. You'll be surprised how much better your cleaner works.

Shake the bag thoroughly to get the dust out of the pores of the cloth. And every month or so brush the bag... but don't ever wash it.

No, no, lady! Don't run your cleaner over pins, tacks, hair pins, coins or other hard objects. Pick them up by hand, and you'll avoid unnecessary repairs.

Check the brush to see that it is properly adjusted—about one-eighth inch below the nozzle. It should be reset periodically to compensate for wear.

A new brush sweeps clean. So if the tufts become badly worn, replace the brush. And remember to keep it free from hair, lint and thread.

Famous last words—Follow the manufacturer's instructions for lubricating your cleaner. And don't attempt to service your motor. Let your dealer do it.

Let Us Have Faith

Besides buying War Bonds and Stamps, we here at home have a duty to perform to keep faith with the boys at the front. To keep ourselves financially strong so there'll be jobs and homes for them to come back to—and the kind of a country they're fighting for.

To this end this bank is co-operating with the people of our territory in every way possible. That is our duty, as we understand it.

TRIM SHIP FOR ACTION!

We are engaged in a war to save our American tradition of liberty and opportunity for ourselves and our children. Our leaders have committed us to become the arsenal of democracy; to furnish food for our allies; through our lend-lease to help finance the Allied war machine and, finally, to raise and equip an army of some 10 million men.

Any one of these jobs is a tremendous undertaking. We are thousands of miles from the theater of war, and this involves tremendous problems of transportation. All of these jobs together will tax every resource of the United States. Already we face rationing and priorities in our materials and acute shortage of manpower, and a burden of taxes which indicates our financial resources are strained to the utmost.

Of a certainty, we must have complete unity if we are to do this job, and face the postwar future with hope and confidence.

American industry, agriculture and finance must use to the maximum the productive power, initiative and intelligence latent in every American.

No Time or Place for Drones

There must be no drones hidden away on public payrolls, engaged in peacetime experiments which are useless under the emergency of war. Every branch of our military service is devoted to the sole purpose of fighting and winning this war. Our government, both local, state and national, should inspire and lead in the support our civilian population gives to the war effort. Unnecessary civic expenditures, surplus payrollers, useless economic and social experiments have no place in a war emergency.

The new Congress is tackling this job with a will and a purpose. Those Congressmen are our representatives and we, the people, should support them to the limit. Right now they are trying to bring some order and efficiency in the prevention of excessive profits in war contracts by the Army, Navy and Maritime commission. The present law, passed by the old Congress, provides for a "renegotiation" of their war contracts by each department.

New Bureaus Not Needed

There are over three million of these contracts. Not more than 5 per cent will show any excessive profits after taxes have been paid. The ordinary man on the street would say that the Internal Revenue Department can easily discover any excess profit from any war contract. Certainly we can use the manpower that would be wasted to much better advantage in other places.

We, the people, want Congress to adopt the most direct, efficient and economical method of doing this job. None of us believes in excess profits on war contracts. There are ceiling prices on most things we produce. Now let's get at the job of cutting down unnecessary civic expenditures and cutting unnecessary payrollers off the payroll.

WE ARE AMERICANS

Our United States is a government by all, conceived and dedicated by and with the consent of the governed. It constantly promotes individual dignity, worth and opportunity; guarantees to every citizen freedom of religion, speech, assembly, press and petition; safeguards private property; maintains equal justice before the law; provides free schools for all, and constantly seeks social and economic security and the blessings of liberty for young and old.

This is our country. Individuals or groups may have fallen short or failed in their duty, but we, the people, press on to our destiny. We, the people, love and cherish our Republic. We pledge support for its institutions with our lives and sacred honor.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The tradition of American cavalry threads back to Indian warfare days and although modern armies are largely motorized today, the cavalry still plays an important role. Sturdy, well trained horses and excellent equipment and trappings are necessary.

When men are in the saddle for hours, their saddles, saddle rolls and other equipment must be made to stand the wear. Complete with carbine and helmets, the equipment for the cavalryman runs into hundreds of dollars. You can help provide this with your War Bond purchases. If you have not done so, join the Payroll Savings Plan and put ten percent of your income into War Bonds. U. S. Treasury Department

"Renegotiation" Might Touch You

Under no other circumstances is the fine spirit of neighborly cooperation shown to better advantage in a rural community than in the case of fire or other calamity. This friendly spirit is not based upon personal interest, but upon the deep sympathy that just naturally arises in case of disaster. Of course, there is a personal interest if the fire threatens our own property, but we like to think this unity of spirit in our rural life is typical of America.

There is this same community of interest between industry, labor and agriculture, although sympathy for each other's troubles seldom comes to the surface.

Every farmer knows that his best market for the produce of his farm is our local domestic market. He depends upon this domestic market to consume over 90 per cent of what our American farms produce each year. If anything happens to his domestic market, like the depression and loss of employment in the early thirties, agriculture is at once affected. On the other hand, if anything happens to the buying power of agriculture, industry is hurt just as badly.

Right now congress is considering the renegotiation of all government contracts. The law was passed on April 28, 1942. Some people are urging that these new renegotiation bureaus should examine contracts made long before the law was passed.

Take the case of a contract made in 1940. The work has been done and paid for; taxes have been paid to the government on the profits, if any; labor has been paid and the money balance distributed either in repairs to plant or perhaps paid in dividends to stockholders.

Danger of Retroactive Measures.

Suppose that same thing happened to our local store, or even to our farmers themselves. Suppose the prices we received for our crops, or the conservation payments by the government for 1941 or 1940 were suddenly to be "renegotiated." Every farmer has either fed out or sold his crop, purchased new machinery or perhaps painted the barn, or bought a new dress for his wife. If, under a retroactive law, he were suddenly put up against the threat of renegotiation, all of his credit, and perhaps even his investment would be disturbed.

No one wants unfair profits or excessive dividends out of war contracts. Investigation has shown that over 95 per cent of industry and business made no excessive profits out of the war. Certainly no farmers have received excessive prices for farm crops.

Now Is the Time for Unity
We want to get on with this war. We must have unity. Unity is based upon mutual confidence in our government and in each other. We are all looking forward to a return of peace after the war has been won. We will then want to resume our domestic markets, replace worn-out farm machinery and resume our normal trade relationships. Industry and business will need all of their American ingenuity and strength to provide jobs which, in turn, furnish our domestic market after the war.

True, renegotiation at present is applied only to industry and contracts with the government. But we all recognize the good old American principle that what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.

If business contracts can be renegotiated under a law passed long after the business contracts were made, how about the sanctity of our own contracts?

Just now the fire seems far from our own neighborhood, but if we look closely, our domestic markets, both now and after the war, are involved. We can well take time off to show a little neighborly spirit and help put out the fire.

The Peoples' Edict

Money to pay for the war, yes; but no money for frills in the civil operations of any of our governing bodies. That is the edict of the American people.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The biggest field gun in the Army. That's the 240-mm. howitzer. It's twenty-feet of barrel and must be pulled into position by tractors. After it is rolled into place, its own wheels are removed and the Big Bertha is set upon its emplacement ready to fire at its target some twenty miles away.

The cost of these huge guns runs into thousands of dollars but we can assure the Army of obtaining them by our purchases of War Bonds. Ten percent or more of your income is necessary. The easiest way is to join the Payroll Savings Plan at your office or factory. Let's "Top that ten percent." U. S. Treasury Department

ORLAND SERVICEMEN'S NEWS
Mrs. H. Kruspe, Chr. A. L. Aux.

Your chairman wishes to thank the following business places for funds from their donation cans, Raschke's Service Station, $10.02, Barney Moores, $2.95, and Reish's, $5.48.

Somewhere in New Guinea Sunday nite, March 28, 1943.
Mrs. H. Kruspe:
Dear Folks:

Just a note to thank you people for my rather late Christmas. I just received your gift of candy, cigarettes, razor blades and such in this morning's mail call. It sure was a welcome surprise even if it did have to chase me down to Panama, across to Australia and finally reach me here in New Guinea. The things really came in handy cause those luxuries aren't to be bought over here. Its rather difficult to endure when you have money and no place to spend it, but that's the situation here.

I've been lucky enough to have a rather interesting time of it during my stay in the army, with all this traveling. Sorta looks like it's our turn to go to bat with the Japs and I'm pleased to have an active part in it after my time of practicing. When all the boys return (after this mess is wound up) we should have some dandy bull sessions comparing notes on our travels and arguing about which part of the army really won the war. I think just about every branch is represented from the Pill Rollers to the Air Corp.

This is really rugged country here and we aren't exactly having a picnic when it comes to living conditions. Plenty of ants, lizards and all the jungle inhabitants to make us uncomfortable. Some of the boys stumbled onto a fifteen foot python this morning and he was speedily disposed of with a machete. This afternoon we had Joe E. Brown at our little open air theatre (in person). It was the first day of rest for us in quite some time and that was a fitting climax. The weather is oppressively hot when it is raining here and I can readily see why these Fuzzie Wuzzies wear loin cloth only. They are really quite friendly fellows in spite of their appearance and sell us coconuts and carved sea shells occasionally.

All in all its quite a change from my former life and I hope the rest of the fellows have as many interesting and entertaining experiences as I've had in their army careers. I know I've been pretty neglectful when it was my turn to answer their letters so I'll use this letter to say Hello to all you Orland people and my pals of former days I think I've rambled on a lot more than I intended to and that its time for me to call a halt. Thank you again and Adios.

Dear Mrs. Kruspe & Am. Legion:
Many thanks for the necktie and identification tag holder, they are most practical gifts for members of Uncle Sam's Army. I can assure you that they are being put to the very best of use. Your organization is doing a splendid job of building morale, it should be highly praised for its generosity to the Orland boys in service.

I am now accustomed to army life and have had many delightful as well as unpleasant experiences. I am lucky enough to be stationed with a group of Chicago lads. The living quarters are of the latest modern design and the food is the best. I miss the good old home town and my many true friends. A few lines from anyone shall be most welcome.

Regards,

The following is another interesting letter from one of our boys. It's from Pfc. Ellsworth McGovney, who is stationed somewhere in England.

"After a great many delays and procrastinations, I am getting around to writing to you again. I have just been playing Gin Rummy with Frank and Vern in front of our fireplace. It was very warm and I thought that I would take a walk to get some fresh air, so here I am at Battalion Headquarters writing.

As you know, practically everything but air is rationed over here, so the steak dinners that we all used to enjoy so much is taboo. We have ration cards that entitles us to the necessities and a few, very few, luxuries, (that is what they have come to be) such as candy. Yesterday, I and my charming ration card took a walk to the Post Exchange to do my weekly marketing. We have cards that are punched each week and that is the only purchase that can be made. So it behooves me to be sure to get all the things that I am likely to need during the coming week. Some of the things that have become more or less luxuries are candy bars, gum, life savers, cookies and fruit juices.

Yesterday was H. C's. birthday, so he asked me to go to town with him to celebrate. We went to another town nearby. Never before have I felt that I was walking into absolute eternity. We got to the town rather early, so there wasn't a great deal of human traffic—there was no vehicular—there was a very unnatural quietness in the streets, the complete lack of light that enveloped us was almost breathtaking. We thought the dimouts in the east were inconvenient, but this blackout business is an entirely different thing.

The other day when we were going into town, we had the pleasure of seeing "The Hunt". The master of the hounds was resplendent in his red coat, and the other riders were very interesting sights in their black coats, derbies, and white ascot ties. They had a pack of hounds of about 20 or 30—they were all good looking specimens.

We went out the other night; we had fish and chips—the fish were file of cod and fried just right. While we waited for the food we walked in a little English garden, it was quaint as the dickens. There were crocuses and snow drops blooming along the stone pathway, and there was a huge cat sitting on the brick garden wall—very picturesque and all that.

Our mail has been coming rather well and I hope that ours to you is coming along nicely, too.

A few days ago some of the fellows and I went into one of the neighboring towns. We visited the cathedral, which is about 1000 years old and it really is a beautiful thing.

Bob who lives in Chicago and I had a delightful trip through the Wye Valley. We had very good accommodations at hotel, the weather was perfect, the scenery unsurpassable.

We were happy to receive the following note and poem from another of our boys.

Since the rest of the Servicemen have sent various letters of 'thanks' I have attempted to express my thoughts of appreciation in a crude form of dime store poetry:

"Just a word of wholesome gratitude To be sent to the forty-five degree latitude

From this sunny healthful region For one distinct little reason.

To the News-Bulletin cunning Editor

A word of praise must rise For sending the home town paper

To those defending land, sea and skies.

To the faithful Women's Service Club

For their kind acts and deeds Praise from the mouth can't utter forth

But from the heart proceeds.

Above the things thus far accomplished

There are greater ones to strive for So that everyone is free to walk and talk

As they were before Pearl Harbor."

Sincerely Pvt. Kurt Hellmuth

Thank you very much Kurt, we do appreciate hearing from you, as we do from all of our boys who are stationed all over the world.

Dear Helen:
How are you all? We've certainly been busy here lately.

Palm Sunday I had the very great honor of seeing our Commander-in-Chief, President F. D. Roosevelt, who visited us here at Camp Robinson. He attended Palm Sunday services with us at a field house jammed with thousands of officers and men. It was well worth getting soaked to the skin and walking in mud to our ankles for two days. It had rained steadily here for a day and a half, and the water ran down our trousers and filled our boots.

Hoping you had a nice Easter, Bob.

As Yanks Ripped Rommel's Lines in Tunisian Hills

In picture at upper left an American sapper (kneeling at right) holds an Axis mine which he has just dug from the sand near Gafsa, Tunisia. Upper right: On the hunt for snipers, a U. S. security unit searches the ruins of an old fortress in Gafsa. Below, left: Through rubble-filled streets and past the bomb-blasted buildings of Gafsa march U. S. troops, meeting no resistance. When the call comes to go aloft, U. S. pilots are rushed out to their airplanes in jeeps. In picture at lower right one of the airmen is running from the jeep to his sky fighter.

U-Boat Meets British Destroyer—Goes Down to Stay

One Phase of Tough Job for Army Engineers 'Ike' Meets 'Monty'

In transporting pipe and other supplies for a pipeline connecting the Norman oil fields of Canada with White Horse, on the Alaskan highway, to make fuel easily available for defense stations, U. S. army engineers overcame great obstacles. Here a convoy of supply barges and towing craft nears the end of a rough 16-mile cross-country voyage.

Farm Migration to More Fertile Areas

As partial solution of the farm manpower problem, farm families are being transported from so-called "submarginal" low-production farms to areas where production is high. Picture shows men, women and children arriving in New York en route to the truck farming region around Stamford Springs, Conn. Camp Connors, former CCC camp, will house them.

Queen of Roses

Be-ruffled, but unruffled, smiling Kathleen Turner poses royally with an "Editor McFarland" rose, after she had been selected Florida's rose queen at Cypress Gardens, Fla.

Old Man River Goes on Rampage

Backwaters of the swollen Missouri river, bursting through dikes, inundated hundreds of acres of land, and made many homeless in the vicinity of Omaha, Neb. In picture at top Mrs. Eli Kotol is being carried to safety on the back of a real "mudder." Below: Here soldiers are shown on the Locust street dike, plugging a leak in the levee with bags which they have filled with sand.

Jap Prisoners in South Pacific Camp

Japanese prisoners of war are shown being given medical treatment by a U. S. officer at a South Pacific prisoner's camp. Smile on prisoner's face seems genuine enough.

Allies Work Side by Side in No. Africa

Anti-aircraft gunners of three United Nations are seen working side by side as they protect an Allied-held North African port from Axis air attacks. In the foreground an American unit mans a Bofors gun, while just behind them is a French crew servicing their Oerlikon gun. In the far background is a British crew with another Bofors.

America's No. 1 Ball Fan Gets His Pass

Paging Der Fuehrer

Imagine the cab driver's surprise when he found Adolf Hitler as a passenger in his car when he came out of a lunchroom in New York. The cab driver called a policeman, who quickly took Hitler in tow.

New Leg for Hero

A cheerful smile is flashed by torpedoman second class Harry J. Rhodes of Darlington, N. C., as he prepares to go adventuring on his new artificial leg and foot at the Oak Knoll naval hospital, San Francisco.

Sure Sign of Spring

Ladeez and gentlemen! Your kind attention, please! You are now about to witness the world's greatest bicycle act! Yes, the circus has come to town, surest proof that spring is here to stay. The Shyretto, famous bicycle and unicycle trio, are pictured in action under the big top in New York.

Tries to Enlist

Ronnie Wycoff told navy officers he was 16, and a midget, in order to get a seafarer's job. When I. D. Boyd showed the five-year-old lad how much he lacked in stature he changed his mind.

When the soldier talks about "the skipper" he means his captain, the head of his company. And that's just what the title "captain" means. It comes from the Latin word "caput" meaning "head." Another leader high in the Army man's favor is Camel cigarettes—they're first choice with men in the Army. (Based on actual sales records from service men's own stores.) When you're sending gifts from home, keep in mind that a carton of cigarettes is always most welcome. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

ON THE OFFENSIVE AMERICA!

Wars are won by attacking, not by sitting in a fort!

And today America is taking the offensive against the Axis with hard-fighting, non-stop men and materials!

We're taking the offensive, too, against the enemy at home—the inflationary 6th column that blows prices sky high.

You can help in both fights by saving at least 10% of your money in U. S. War Bonds every pay day. Attack the Axis with your dollars today.

You can start with as little as a 10c War Stamp and you can get a $25.00 War Bond (maturity value) for only $18.75—at your local post office, bank or other convenient sales agency.
U. S. Treasury Department

It's A People's War

We are paying more in taxes than ever before . . . and likely will pay more. But we cannot rely on taxes to finance the war. It would not be fair to base a tax on the average single family income when many families have more than one income. We could borrow all the money from the banks, but for both economic and social reasons this is undesirable. The government would then sacrifice its greatest dam against inflation. This is a People's War and the people should finance it. The people WANT to finance it. Sale of War Bonds has mounted consistently since Pearl Harbor.
They give their lives . . . You lend your money.
